Host Upsell Ideas

Airbnb Guest Guide Refresh

Simple optional add-ons hosts can include.

Pack Snapshot

- Buyer: Short-term rental hosts
- Category: Local Service
- Startup cost: $0
- Time to first sale: 1-7 days
- Difficulty: Easy
- Positioning hook: Hosts forget the easiest guest-experience upgrade.

Asset objective

- Hosts need fewer repetitive questions and better guest experience without installing new software.
- Keep the promise concrete: Local recommendations need to stay current.
- Use this asset to create a buyer-ready deliverable, not as a generic brainstorming note.

Core checklist

- Local breakfast basket with clear price and order deadline.
- Late checkout request with availability rules.
- Paid local itinerary for families, couples, or remote workers.
- Partner discount list for cafes, tours, gyms, and transport.
- Emergency convenience kit with replacement fee clarity.

Quality bar

- The asset should be specific enough that a buyer can approve it without a meeting.
- Every recommendation must be visible, actionable, and easy to explain.
- Remove anything that sounds impressive but does not change buyer behavior.

Delivery note

- Send the finished asset with a short summary of what changed.
- Include the next recommended step, the owner input needed, and the review deadline.
- Keep a copy of before/after evidence for renewals and follow-ups.

Guest-facing upsell copy

- Breakfast basket: Want breakfast ready on arrival? Order by [time] for [$].
- Late checkout: If available, late checkout to [time] is [$]. Ask by [deadline].
- Local itinerary: We can send a custom half-day plan for [family/couple/work trip] for [$].
- Keep all upsells optional, transparent, and easy for the host to fulfill.

Upsell approval standard

- Upsells must be optional, transparent, easy to fulfill, and clearly priced.
- Do not add an upsell that creates operational stress for the cleaner or host.
- Best upsells solve arrival, celebration, convenience, or local planning friction.
- Track which upsells guests actually request before making them prominent.

Buyer-ready deliverable standard

- This asset is for short-term rental hosts; remove generic language before sending it to a prospect or client.
- The finished version should name the buyer context, the visible problem, the exact output, and the next decision required.
- Use concrete operational language. Replace broad promises with observable improvements: clearer menu, faster reply, cleaner handoff, fewer repeat questions, better approval trail.
- Keep one owner-facing summary at the top and one implementation checklist at the end so the buyer can act without a second explanation.

Inputs to collect before delivery

- Business name, owner or approver, preferred contact channel, and deadline.
- Current source material: screenshots, URLs, exports, menus, customer messages, reviews, product pages, or public market data depending on the pack.
- Brand constraints: logo, tone, colors, prohibited claims, legal-sensitive statements, and examples they already like.
- Approval constraints: who signs off, what can be changed without approval, and what must stay untouched.
- Delivery format: editable working file, final PDF/export, implementation checklist, and optional follow-up message.

Evidence capture for renewal or case study

- Save the before state with dated screenshots or source files.
- Record the exact changes made and why they were prioritized.
- Track buyer response time, approval friction, and implementation date.
- Ask for permission before using any quote, logo, review, screenshot, market data, or client result in a portfolio.
- If the buyer does not approve public proof, keep an anonymized internal case note for improving future pitches.

Client handoff message

- Here is the finished host upsell ideas for [business]. I included the working file, final export, and the short checklist for approval.
- The items marked [APPROVAL NEEDED] are the only parts I would not publish/send until you confirm them.
- My recommended next step is [specific next action]. If you want me to handle that as well, I can package it as [starter/standard/retainer option].

Pricing and scope guardrails

- Starter scope: one focused deliverable, one input list, one approval round, final export.
- Standard scope: deeper audit, 2-3 deliverables, implementation notes, and two approval rounds.
- Retainer scope: recurring refresh, monthly report, or ongoing response/review workflow with a fixed cadence.
- Out of scope unless priced separately: photography, ad spend, legal review, complex integrations, custom software, printing, and guaranteed performance outcomes.

Final QA before sending

- All bracketed placeholders are replaced or intentionally marked for buyer approval.
- Every link, date, price, hour, policy, claim, and contact detail is checked against a source.
- The final file opens on another machine and the filename clearly identifies the buyer, asset, and date.
- The buyer can tell what to do next within the first 30 seconds of opening the asset.
- No income, ranking, revenue, health, legal, or advertising performance guarantee is implied.
