Pack Snapshot

- Buyer: Homeowners, landlords, property managers, and small commercial sites
- Category: Local Service
- Startup cost: $101-$500
- Time to first sale: 1-7 days
- Difficulty: Medium
- Positioning hook: Dirty concrete is an easy before-and-after local service.

Asset objective

- Power washing has obvious visual proof, local buyer demand, and a clear first offer when you keep the scope narrow and quote by surface, access, and risk.
- Keep the promise concrete: Check local water rules, surface suitability, runoff, insurance, and safety before accepting paid work.
- Use this asset to create a buyer-ready deliverable, not as a generic brainstorming note.

Core checklist

- Confirm local water restrictions, runoff rules, insurance needs, and any site-specific permission before accepting paid work.
- Check surface type, condition, cracks, loose material, paint, sealant, drainage, staining, nearby gardens, pets, electrical outlets, and foot traffic.
- Confirm water access, parking/setup area, hose route, weather window, and where dirty water will flow.
- Take before photos from fixed angles, complete a small test patch, and get approval before continuing.

- Avoid delicate, painted, sealed, old, cracked, roof, electrical, or chemical-heavy surfaces unless properly trained, insured, and scoped.

Quality bar

- The asset should be specific enough that a buyer can approve it without a meeting.
- Every recommendation must be visible, actionable, and easy to explain.
- Remove anything that sounds impressive but does not change buyer behavior.

Delivery note

- Send the finished asset with a short summary of what changed.
- Include the next recommended step, the owner input needed, and the review deadline.
- Keep a copy of before/after evidence for renewals and follow-ups.

Go/no-go decision gate

- Do not start if water access, permission, runoff path, surface type, local rules, insurance, weather, or safe work area are unclear.
- Do not clean delicate stone, old timber, painted surfaces, sealed surfaces, roofs, electrical areas, cracked surfaces, or heavy chemical stains without proper training and scope.
- Do not promise complete stain removal. Oil, rust, gum, paint, mould, and age marks may need specialist treatment or may only improve partially.
- Stop if the test patch lifts paint, loosens surface material, creates unsafe runoff, affects neighbouring property, or reveals a surface risk.

Pre-job photo list

- Wide photo of the whole surface from the client-facing angle.
- Close-up of stains, cracks, loose areas, drains, edges, gardens, and nearby walls or doors.
- Water access point and hose route.
- Runoff path and any drains, gardens, neighbouring boundaries, or footpaths affected.
- After photos from the same angles, plus one close-up proof area.

Client prep checklist

- Move cars, bins, furniture, mats, toys, and loose items from the work area.
- Keep pets and children away from the surface during work and drying.
- Confirm outdoor power points, doors, windows, and drainage areas that need protection.
- Confirm whether detergent is allowed or whether water-only cleaning is required.
- Approve the test patch before full cleaning continues.

Completion handoff

- Send before/after photos, any areas that did not fully lift, and any surface limitations noticed.
- Recommend drying time and when the client can move items back.
- Offer the next clean window: quarterly, pre-listing, end-of-lease, seasonal, or after heavy weather.

Surface and safety standard

- Start every job with photos, a test patch, water-access confirmation, drainage review, and clear no-damage boundaries.
- Use lower-risk surfaces first: basic concrete driveways, paths, and bin pads. Avoid delicate surfaces until trained.
- Check runoff, nearby drains, gardens, pets, electrical points, loose stones, old paint, cracked surfaces, and people walking through the work area.
- If local water restrictions, runoff rules, insurance, or surface suitability are unclear, do not accept the paid job.
